The File Transfer Protocol is used for exactly what its name suggests. FTP is a common method of moving files between two Internet sites or between client and server. FTP is a special way to login to another Internet site for the purposes of retrieving and for sending files. There are many Internet sites that have established publicly accessible repositories of material that can be obtained using FTP, by logging in using the account name anonymously, thus these sites are called anonymous ftp servers.

Example of an FTP site:
 CDS ISIS ftp Site for downloading its Products <ftp://ftp.unesco.org/pub/winitis/>
Z39.50 or ISO 23950

Z39.50 is an ANSI / NISO standard for information storage and retrieval. It is a protocol which specifies data structures and interchange rules that allow a client machine to search databases on a server machine and retrieve records that are identified as a result of such a search. Z39.50 protocol is used for searching and retrieving bibliographic records across more than one system. This protocol is not used by the Internet search engines (e.g. http). It is more complex and more comprehensive and powerful than http. Z39.50 has been extended to allow system feedback through system dialogue. Like most applications working under a client-server environment, Z39.50 needs a Z39.50 client program on one end, and a server program on the other end.

Some Valuable Feedback by Students:

1. This course has been done with great care and love.
2. I learned something new in this course and this course is good .
3. I am very satisfied in this course and I learn many things about digital library that will be more beautiful of my future.
4. Very effective and essential course for every student.
5. I have benefited a lot from this course, if I study library science later, the content taught in this course will help me a lot.
6. This course is very helpful for my study. all study material I need easily
7. In this course I learned about how a library is set up digitally. I learned about how a book was uploaded in search portal, how book exchange was done.
8. The supplementary Library Course I completed was a rewarding experience. It provided me with new insights into effective organization, research methodologies, and information management. The course content was thoughtfully designed and informative, enhancing my understanding of the subject. While the instructors were knowledgeable, a more interactive approach to assignments could have added depth to the learning process. Despite this, the add-on course broadened my horizons and equipped me with practical skills that I can apply in various fields.
9. The course is very helpful and interesting. I like it.

ASSESSMENT:

A questionnaire was distributed through Google form to the students with 10 questions, each worth 2 marks. Students who obtained enough marks on exam they are passed the qualification criteria.
